Morinville celebrates National Indigenous Peoples Day

By Stephen Dafoe

National Indigenous Peoples Day in Canada is celebrated annually on June 21. It is a day to recognize and honour the diverse cultures, histories, and contributions of First Nations, Inuit, and Métis peoples in Canada. This day provides an opportunity to learn about Indigenous communities' rich traditions and heritage and celebrate their ongoing presence and resilience.

National Indigenous Peoples Day, first proclaimed in 1996, has since become an essential occasion for cultural events, ceremonies, and gatherings nationwide. Morinville held National Indigenous Peoples Day celebrations at the Morinville Community Cultural Centre (MCCC) and Town Hall. The MCCC had Teepee Teachings in the early morning and a formal celebration with Indigenous drummers and dancers. Emcee Sarah Hall, Alexander First Nation Chief George Arcand Jr., Morinville Mayor Simon Boersma, and Sturgeon County Mayor Alanna Hnatiw all spoke of the importance of the day in terms of a step toward reconciliation and building relationships between Alexander First Nation and the two municipalities. The Kipohtakaw Singers joined the Yellowbird family in demonstrating indigenous song and dance. Traditional and fancy dance styles and a drum dance by a guest dancer from Nunavut were demonstrated for students and adults who attended the celebration. Representatives from Alexander First Nation and Morinville Town Council gathered at 1 p.m. to permanently raise the Treaty 6 flag above Town Hall. The Kipohtakaw Singers performed flag, victory, and honour songs during the celebration.

Treaty Six is one of the historic agreements made between the Indigenous peoples of Canada and the Canadian government. It was signed on Aug. 23, 1876, near Fort Carlton in present-day Saskatchewan. The treaty involved several Plains Cree, Assiniboine, and other First Nations bands. The Treaty 6 flag will fly permanently above Town Hall along with the national, provincial and town flags.

Métis Fest a success

The music was very inviting to dancers.

Moose meat was smoked the traditional way, over wood and no spices added.

By Irene van der Kloet

The organizers of Métis Fest 2023 could not have asked for better weather and a better turnout on June 24.

From near and far, visitors came to Métis Crossing to celebrate the Métis culture and history. It was a place to gather, share stories and experience the vibrant culture.

“Im excited to see the community gather once again. Please take time to connect and participate in our beautiful Métis culture”, Métis Nation of Alberta (MNA) President Audrey Poitras said in her welcoming address. That is precisely what the roughly 1800 visitors did. They visited each other and enjoyed the music of various musicians throughout the day. Apart from the meal, the podium with the musicians may have been the most prominent attraction.

The dance floor quickly filled up for the jigging competition, while Memphis

Pambrun entertained the audience with his music during dinner.

The audience was treated to a free dinner of bison meat with vegetables, potatoes, salad, and dessert. Once the dinner announcement was made, people lined up, and though the lines were long, the wait was relatively short.

On the grounds of Métis Crossing, visitors could familiarize themselves with Métis culture. Several stations with cultural artifacts were set up inside the big dining hall. Outside, the Historic Village hosted many activities for young and old. Wildlife expert Joe Urie shared his encounters with wild animals, while visitors could test their survival skills at the Hideaway Traditional Skills Challenge.

Visitors aged 12 and up could try their skills at flint napping and gold panning with hands-on experience.

Various art projects showcased the rich Métis culture, such as painted rocks, finger weaving, soap making and beaded bracelet making. In contrast, horse enthusiasts could try their skills at weighing and tying a pack onto an artificial horse under the guidance of Tracey Klettl.

Anyone who had never tasted moose could try a piece at the moose meat smoking station. The day was rich in culture, knowledge and sharing.

Throughout the evening, the focus was more on the stage, where the Indigenous Fashion Show caught the eye of the audience, followed by the Métis Child and Family Dancers.

Altogether, Métis Crossing showcased itself as the go-to place in the region for history, culture, entertainment and good food.

Meet Odin: Morinville Library's Marvelous Panther Chameleon

By Stephen Dafoe

The Morinville Community Library has long chosen the chameleon as its mascot and even incorporated it into its logo.

The library's previous chameleon mascot was named Thor. After Thor retired from public view, the library stuck with the Norse folklore and named the new chameleon Odin.

Odin is a panther chameleon, scientifically known as furcifer pardalis. They are striking and fascinating reptiles native to the lush rainforests and coastal regions of Madagascar.

The arboreal creature has a slender body structure, with a distinctive casque, or helmet, atop its head. They possess independently rotating eyes, providing a 360-degree field of vision.

Library Assistant Margaret Meetsma said Odin is a pretty cool reptile to have around. "He is pretty amazing because he really likes people," Meetsma said. "If you come by the library, you'll probably usually see him sitting right by the glass doors [of his terrarium] and pawing on the doors, hoping that you'll be taking him out."

While library staff are happy to handle the chameleon for patrons to see, they cannot allow patrons to hold the lizard. "If we had people all touching him, he would probably get sick," Meetsma explained.

Young patrons often ask if Odin changes colours like Pascal from the movie Tangled. Although the lizard may get a little lighter or darker in tone, Meetsma said he does not change colours as some chameleons do.

Panther chameleons showcase striking hues, ranging from fiery reds, oranges, and yellows to vivid blues, greens, and purples. Odin is predominantly green in colour but has some orange on his underbelly.

Meetsma said the panther chameleon eats a diet of between 10 and 20 crickets per day, but his favourite food is horned caterpillars.

The panther chameleon possesses an incredible tongue characterized by its extraordinary length and lightning-fast speed.

When hunting for prey, this chameleon can extend its tongue with remarkable precision and strike its target in a fraction of a second, capturing insects with impressive accuracy.

Odin can be found in the library near the front desk.

Canadians continue to pour into Alberta

Alberta has gained residents from other provinces and territories for the seventh quarter in a row, attracting a total of 68,265 new residents (net in-migrants less out-migrants) since the third quarter of 2021.

During the first three months of 2023, 31,031 people moved to Alberta from another part of Canada while 15,245 did the opposite for a net gain of 15,786 residents.

The quarterly gain represents the sixth highest net inflow into Alberta since at least 1961 when the current data series begins.

The second highest gain was recorded just last year in the third quarter. (The record was set at 20,706 in the third quarter of 1980.)

Only three other provinces gained residents from interprovincial migration in the first quarter: Nova Scotia (+2,690), New Brunswick (+1980), and Prince Edward Island (+790).

Ontario posted the largest net outflow (-14,732) and was the largest source of migrants into Alberta at about of the net inflow.

What's making Alberta such an attractive place to either stay or move to at the moment?

There are many factors in play, but the recent spikes in net gains are likely driven by two main things: 1) relatively strong economic conditions; and 2) less expensive home prices than in places like Toronto and Vancouver.

Congratulations are in order for the 2023 graduates of Sturgeon Composite High School in Namao. They have successfully achieved this significant milestone, and their hard work and dedication have paid off.

The Mario Theme Positive Playground Fun Day held last Thursday was a resounding success for the students of grades 1-5 at Legal Catholic school. The event, organized by Mrs. Moylan and expertly executed by the grade 6 leaders who managed the stations, provided an enjoyable afternoon for everyone involved.
