Morinville Centennial Community Gardens has new leadership

By Stephen Dafoe

The Morinville Centennial Community Gardens (MCCG) will continue into the 2024 gardening season after several volunteers have stepped up to lead the organization, preventing the non-profit's dissolution and disbursement of funds.

With the non-profit's executive down to three people and the Gardens' President Johanna Silver stepping down, the group had two people left on the executive, too few to continue under the province's societies act.

Members were informed of the group's situation in an Oct. 30 email. Long-time member and past executive member Doug Neuman decided to step up and offer his services as president at the Nov. 20 meeting.

"When I saw the email that said we might have to dissolve the Gardens Society, I thought, 'Well, if there is a time to step up, probably now is the time to step up,'" Neuman said.

He was not alone in stepping up to keep the Gardens going.

The new leadership roster fills all positions, which the group has struggled with recently. Joining Neuman are existing executive members Linda Mondor as Vice President and Paula Collins as Treasurer.

The secretary for the group is Christine Wengrzynski, and Michelle Rheubottom will serve as Registrar.

Directors-at-large are Becky McNeil and Val Loeth, the latter of whom started the organization in 2011.

"I think it speaks to the passion that our members have for gardening," Neuman said of the increase in executive.

"We have this valuable service that we provide to the community, and I think it's easy for people to get apathetic and get wrapped up in their own lives. But when there's that threat of, 'Hey! This thing might not be here if you don't step up,' then I think that galvanizes a lot of

Morinville Council abandons staff cost-cutting measures in 2023 budget after unanimous vote

By Colin Smith

December 12.

Councillor Scott Richardson, who had originally proposed the motion, moved that it be rescinded.

This followed a presentation by Chief Administrative Officer Naleen Narayan and then a closed session of council.

In his presentation, Narayan declared that administration would be unable to provide council with the staffing implications of the possible budget cuts by December 12 as called for in the motion.

He then put forward a view of council's role as providing a strategic vision, stressing that need for long-term planning rather than too narrowly on the current situation.

Morinville council has decided against trying to save hundreds of thousands of dollars in the 2023 budget, specifically by cutting town staff costs.

At a special meeting Tuesday, Nov. 21, council members voted unanimously to rescind a motion calling on administration to come back to council with the implications of budget cuts of $200,000, $300,000, $500,000 and $700,000 targeted at staff costs.

That motion had been passed 5-2 at council's regular meeting the previous week, with information on possible reductions to staff salaries, wages and benefits and training sought by

Morinville Council abandons staff cost-cutting measures in 2023 budget after unanimous vote

Narayan said he stands behind the 2024 budget, which would result in a 7.3% tax increase, pointing to rising costs beyond the town's control and defending its level of economic efficiency.

He warned council about staff resources already being stretched thin, indicating that budget reductions could result in a drop in well-being and efficiency, along with an increase in the town's already high turnover rate.

"The reality is that this is a service-based organization," Narayan told council. "Any cuts are going to have an impact on service levels and quality."

Following the presentation, Richardson and Councillor Maurice St. Denis asked questions about staff retention and staffing pressure points within the organization but were informed that these were more appropriately dealt with in closed session.

Council then went into the closed session, and after it came out, Richardson moved to rescind.

"I would be willing to put forward a motion to rescind in the light of the information we have received tonight," he said.

Still in force is a second motion passed by council at its November 14 meeting. Moved by Councillor Stephen Dafoe, the motion called on the administration to find $200,000 in operational savings in the 2024 budget.

At that time, Dafoe emphasized that this motion was not related to the one targeting staff costs, and might be a replacement for it in whole or in part.

Narayan affirmed that the administration was able to bring forward this information on December 12.

A subsequent motion by Dafoe on November 21 asking admin to come forward with approximate costs to do a service level review in 2024 passed unanimously.

Canadian economy – same story, different GDP route

By Mark Parsons,
ATB ECONOMICS

A surprising Canadian GDP report this morning. The third quarter fell much more than expected, but the second quarter was revised up sharply. A bit of a GDP rollercoaster, but today's report does not change the storyline that Canada's economy has effectively ground to a halt.

The numbers: Canada's real GDP contracted at an annualized rate of 1.1% in the third quarter, much weaker than the Bloomberg consensus of a modest increase. Exports, business investment and inventories weighed on the Q3 reading, partly offset by stronger housing investment and government spending. The consumer has pulled way back, with spending flat for the second straight quarter. In contrast, second quarter GDP expanded at an annual clip of 1.4%, revised up from -0.2% previously.

In summary, a similar landing spot, but a different route. We can hold off on the 'technical recession' talk (for now), as the economy did not register two straight quarterly declines (see "what is a recession anyway"). The contrast with our southern neighbour is stark, where U.S. third quarter real GDP ran very hot at 5.2% (annualized) following a 2.1% gain in Q2.

Implications? Not the outcome many were expecting, but the main story is the same. The Canadian economy has cooled dramatically under the weight of higher interest rates, and we expect the Bank of Canada to hold again next month. Tomorrow's jobs report is the last big release before the Bank's December 6 decision.

Closer to home, we don't get a provincial breakdown, but the monthly numbers tell us about industries more relevant to Alberta. In the oil sands, GDP edged down slightly (-0.1%) in September, while conventional oil and gas slipped 3.6% with Statistics Canada citing maintenance work on an oil platform off the Atlantic coast. Advance estimates suggest that oil and gas activity picked up in October, contributing to a 0.2% improvement in Canada's overall GDP to kick off the final quarter of the year.

PUBLIC HEARING – Bylaw 1635/23 Amendment to Land Use Bylaw 1385/17

Sturgeon County Council requests public input on proposed Bylaw 1635/23.

The property owner would like to bring their existing fleet service (trucking) business into compliance with the County's Land Use Bylaw on their land at 55013 Hwy 825 (legal land description: RL-24-55-22-W4M). This land is currently subject to the AG-Agriculture district, which does not allow this type of activity.

Public Hearing details

The Public Hearing will be held in person and via videoconference on: Tuesday, December 12 at 2:00 p.m. (or as soon as practical thereafter) Sturgeon County Council Chambers (9613 100 St. in Morinville)

You can view the hearing online at sturgeoncounty.ca/CouncilMeetings

To operate a fleet service at this location the land use district must change, and the applicant is pursuing a Direct Control District. The purpose of a Direct Control District is to provide for developments that, due to their unique characteristics and/or site conditions, require specific direction unavailable in conventional land use districts. The applicant is requesting the land be rezoned to DC24 – Direct Control District 24, which would allow them to apply for a development permit for a fleet service.

Each time land is redistricted, a bylaw is needed to amend the Land Use Bylaw, and a public hearing must be held.

Morinville Centennial Community Gardens has new leadership

that support and a lot of that volunteer hours."

Back to their roots

As president, Neuman hopes to take the MCCG back to its roots figuratively and literally. In an email to the membership on Sunday, Nov. 26, Neuman outlined his thoughts, echoing those he expressed when he was acclaimed into the role.

"I think we have taken on too much work for the number of volunteer hours we can realistically muster, leaving members of the executive spread very thin," Neuman wrote to the members. "I would like to see our group get back to basics and focus first and foremost on our mission statement."

That statement: "Morinville Centennial Community Gardens will provide rental plots in an inclusive and accessible organic garden in Morinville and promote organic gardening," is something Neuman sees as the group's primary focus.

As such, the president recommends consolidating efforts to a single garden site in Champlain Park, eliminating the food bank garden in favour of more rental plots or grass and trees, working with the town on some path improvements, and running meetings quickly and efficiently.

"What we've seen over the past couple of years is we've had a strong focus on that public space side of things and doing all the community events," Neuman said. "Personally, as a gardener, that's less of what I'm interested in. I really like the idea that we can provide these low-cost rental plots to people and give people the opportunity to grow in the garden."

Neuman said that he has observed minimal volunteer support in activities and initiatives outside the core mission statement over his years in the organization.

The president said he believes there is absolutely a place for supporting the food bank. "We should encourage gardeners to grow a row for the food bank," he said, noting that planting, weeding, harvesting and sorting food for the food bank is not the most effective use of the organization's time. "I think it is something that is not sustainable, and I think that is evidenced by the situation in the fall where there were so few people to take on the work that the society might dissolve."

By focusing on the group's mandate and getting that right, the president said there would be opportunities to build from that foundation.

"At this point, given where we were a month ago, I think it is important that we take a realistic look at what we can muster in terms of volunteer hours and plan accordingly," he said.

There was mixed reaction to the ideas at the Nov. 20 meeting, and Neuman and the executive will discuss the new ideas and other topics at upcoming meetings. The president points out that decisions will be made by the group as a whole rather than by any individual members.

The MCCG's next meeting is Tuesday, Dec. 12, at 7 p.m. at the Rendez-Vous Centre in Morinville. Meetings are open to all members and those interested in becoming a member.

"We're always happy to have new faces and new energy," Neuman said. "I think through this, we've heard from a lot of people that feel this is a valuable part of our community."
