Morinville residents commuting more as local jobs struggle to keep up

By Shelley Winger

More than 2,000 Morinville residents commute daily to neighboring towns for work, highlighting a growing gap between population growth and local employment opportunities. Between 2001 and 2021, the town added 915 jobs, rising from 1,880 to 2,795 positions, yet the number of employed residents reached 4,990 in 2021. The employment activity rate, which measures jobs per 1,000 residents, declined over the same period, falling from 287 to 269. While the town's total number of jobs grew, it did not keep pace with the rising population, reflecting a trend that could influence both community engagement and quality of life. Morinville's economic base is primarily defined by agriculture, oil and gas, and manufacturing, yet only 275 jobs, or 9.8 percent of local employment, exist within these sectors. In comparison, most Canadian communities have 18 to 22 percent of local jobs within their economic base. This indicates that residents often rely on external job markets for employment in sectors that the town itself does not provide.

Looking to the future, Morinville's job market is projected to nearly double by 2066, reaching 5,510 positions. However, much of this growth is expected to occur in commercial and institutional sectors, rather than primary industries. While this expansion may provide new local opportunities and increase economic diversity, projections show that employment growth is likely to lag behind population growth.

Sturgeon Composite students and Morinville RCMP rally behind Cops for Cancer fundraiser

By Shelley Winger

Sturgeon Composite High School and the Morinville RCMP detachment came together this week for a successful Cops for Cancer head-shaving fundraiser that saw students, staff and community members rally behind an important cause.

The lunchtime event, held Thursday in the school foyer, invited students to gather and watch as fundraising milestones determined who would have their heads shaved in support of cancer research and children battling cancer. The atmosphere was filled with excitement and school spirit as students stopped by to cheer on participants and support the fundraiser. What began as a fun and engaging school event quickly became a powerful show of community generosity.

Leading up to the event, donation goals were set that included head shaves for school staff members once certain fundraising amounts were reached. The excitement continued to build throughout the campaign as support poured in from the school community and beyond. Students, families, school staff and community members all contributed to the cause, helping push the fundraiser well past its original expectations. Constable Wills played a major role in the fundraiser, raising more than $4,800 personally. What began with an initial group goal of $3,000 quickly grew far beyond expectations. By the end of the event, the Morinville RCMP detachment group had collectively raised an impressive $11,819, an amount that speaks to the tremendous support shown by everyone involved.

The event drew a strong turnout from students and staff, with many gathering in the foyer to show their support and witness the head-shaving fundraiser firsthand. The visible support from the school community helped make the event not only a successful fundraiser, but also a memorable moment for students and organizers alike. Funds raised through the event will go toward Cops for Cancer, supporting children battling cancer and helping fund cancer research initiatives. The overwhelming response from the school and community highlighted the generosity and spirit of those involved, turning the fundraiser into a meaningful event that will have a lasting impact beyond the school walls.

Local jobs

suggesting that commuting patterns will continue for the foreseeable future.

The reliance on external employment centers underscores the importance of strategic economic planning.

Municipal reports note that efforts to attract investment in industrial sectors such as agribusiness and manufacturing could provide more stable local employment and better match residents' skills to available jobs.

At the same time, increasing commuting volumes may require upgrades to transportation infrastructure to accommodate daily travel.

The current employment landscape reflects both challenges and opportunities.

While residents rely on neighboring areas for work, the potential exists to grow local industries, diversify the economy and improve work-life balance for the community. In 2021, Morinville had 2,795 local jobs, but 4,990 residents were employed, meaning roughly 2,195 people commute outside town for work.

The number of jobs per 1,000 residents fell from 287 in 2001 to 269 in 2021, showing that employment growth has not kept pace with population.

Only 9.8 percent of local jobs are in Morinville's main economic sectors - agriculture, oil and gas, and manufacturing - well below the national average of 18 to 22 percent.

By 2066, jobs are projected to grow to 5,510, primarily in commercial and institutional sectors, yet without strategic planning, commuting and reliance on external employment are expected to continue.

By focusing on strategic investment and economic planning, Morinville has the potential to better align local job opportunities with its growing population, providing residents with more stable employment, reduced commuting, and stronger community engagement in the years ahead.

Human activity suspected in April quakes near Morinville, felt across surrounding communities

By Haylee Winger

Residents of Sturgeon County have experienced two earthquakes recently, both of which geologists believe are induced seismic events likely linked to human activity.

The first incident occurred on Wednesday, April 1, at 5:27 p.m. local time, approximately 18 kilometres northeast of Morinville.

The tremor, measured at a magnitude of 4.5, was strong enough to be felt in surrounding communities, including Edmonton, Legal, Bon Accord, and Gibbons.

According to Earthquakes Canada, the event is believed to have been caused by industrial activity rather than natural geological processes.

Such induced earthquakes can be triggered by activities including oil and gas production, mining, or the underground injection of fluids.

Just one week later, on Wednesday, April 8, a magnitude 3.8 earthquake struck 22 kilometres from Morinville at 9:00 p.m. local time.

This quake was particularly noticeable due to its shallow depth of only 1 kilometre (0.6 miles), which amplified the shaking felt near the epicenter.

Sturgeon County officials stress that the municipality does not regulate subsurface industrial operations; oversight is managed by the Alberta Energy Regulator (AER).

Residents with questions about the earthquakes' causes or potential impacts are encouraged to contact the AER directly at <https://www.aer.ca/about-aer/contact-us>.

While induced seismicity remains uncommon, experts emphasize the importance of monitoring these events to understand how human activity interacts with natural geological processes.

Geologists also recommend continued responsible practices by industry operators to reduce potential risks to local communities.

Thanks to Pembina Pipeline Corporation, local youth took part in a week of free Spring Break Stick & Puck at the Morinville Leisure Centre, enjoying fun, laughter, and time on the ice during their school break. - Town of Morinville photos
